

What survival looks like...

IN SCHOOL

The fight-or-flight response (also called hyperarousal, or the acute stress response) is a physiological reaction that occurs in response to a perceived harmful event, attack, or threat to survival

Do you know where I learnt to be brave?
In School, it's a really scary place

When I was little, some wires got connected to the wrong places in my brain. Often I think and feel like I'm under attack even when I'm actually very safe. My brain activates survival mode to protect me.

I don't even know that I have gone into survival mode, I can't even tell you what feels wrong. It happens so often that this part of my brain is really strong and rules over the calm part of my brain. I can't turn it off by myself.

Why is it so important that you know this?

The part of my brain activated to help me survive, is different from the part of my brain activated when I'm calm.

I can only learn properly when the calm part of my brain is activated. When I'm in a survival state it takes over from my calm brain and I struggle to learn. If I don't feel safe, you won't be able to teach me.

The problem is, it's really hard to see when I'm in survival mode.

I look very different to how I feel inside and often I can remain in survival mode for so long, that it seems like part of my personality.

I would love your help to feel safe so I can learn. For you to see that I am in a survival state and it's not a personality trait. I really want to learn, I really want to feel ok.

- ✗ I can't keep myself safe
- ✗ I want to die

You can help me feel safe with the following ...

- ✓ Repetitive simple tasks
- ✓ Weighted blanket
- ✓ Building with lego or play-dough
- ✓ Tell me I'm safe
- ✓ Deep breathing
- ✓ Spending time with a trusted adult
- ✓ Do the task with me
- ✓ Tell me what to do without showing frustration

Spending just a small amount of time making me feel safe, activates the calm part of my brain and I am ready for you to teach me again.

I might need you to do this a few times throughout the task but the more my brain knows how to stay in the calm zone, the less likely I am to go into survival mode.

Thank you for helping me every day to make safe and life changing differences to my brain.

It's an amazing thing you're doing for me.
